Ultimate Anti-Aging 7 Peptide Complex

Hexapeptide-9

Promotes the synthesis of dermal collagen, the regeneration of dermal-epidermal junction and skin differentiation. It also stimulates collagen biosynthesis in the basal layer of the skin.

Tripeptide-1

Rebuilds the skin structure, smoothing and firming the complexion. Stimulates collagen production, binding cells and strengthening the skin layers.

Palmitoyl Tripeptide-1

Helps produce GAGs (Glycosaminoglycans), stimulating fibroblast growth for collagen biosynthesis.

Palmitoyl Pentapeptide-4

Helps to help to boost collagen and elastin formation, with smaller molecular particles for better penetration.

Copper Tripeptide-1

Strengthens the external skin layer and heals skin cells for regeneration.

Acetyl Hexapeptide-8

A natural Botox-derived ingredient which helps minimize wrinkle-forming muscle activities and decreases the depth of fine and deep lines.

(Clinical Results: Use of Acetyl Hexapeptide-8 can reduce wrinkles by up to 27% when used for 30 consecutive days)

Technical

Normal skin
(normal lipid level)

The skin consists of cell and lipid layers. Cells act like building blocks, while lipids act as the cement binding these blocks together. The main role of lipids is to hold cells together, which protects the skin from internal water loss (TEWL — Trans Epidermal Water Loss), and from harmful external factors, such as dust, UV rays and other impurities. This reduces and protects the skin from both internal and external aging respectively.

The skin is an active immune organ, essentially functioning as an external immune system for the body — this is why maintaining good cell and lipid function is especially important. If the skin's immunity is compromised, more serious health issues will arise.

While there are two kinds of lipids, epidermal lipids consist of ceramides, free fatty acids and cholesterol. Delivering sufficient nutrients and moisture to the skin via natural ingredients helps to maintain and boost the lipid barrier, strengthening the skin.
